When people give graduation speeches, they usually tell you: Follow your dreams. Dream! Dream and dream big! Don't stop dreaming until your dreams come true. I think that's nonsense. A lot of people dream. And while they are busy dreaming, the really happy and successful people are busy doing. Dreams are lovely, but they are just dreams. Dreams do not come true just because you dream them. It is hard work that makes things happen and creates change.

My second lesson is this: Don't be (A) (self-conscious/self-centered). Right after graduation, you may have the worst days of your lives. But don't act like you're the most (B) (miserable/fortunate) person in the world, because you are not. We are already a lot luckier than most people on the earth. We live in the country where we are free to speak our own mind and most people believe that everyone should be treated equally (C) (because of/regardless of) gender or race.

In some parts of the world, girls are harmed simply because they want to get an education. Slavery still exists. Children still starve to death. Even in the United States, there are countless people who are living much more difficult lives than we can ever imagine. Crime and violence are part of the everyday lives of these people. So before you complain, remember that you have been given a gift. Your whole life so far has been a gift. It's time to pay for it by doing something for the world.

You should (A) what you have been given in your life and (B) the world.

- ① share ..... announce to
- ② appreciate ..... contribute to
- ③ pay for ..... appeal to
- ④ appreciate ..... call on
- ⑤ share ..... go through

My third lesson is this: (A) Since I'm a very successful woman and a mother with three children, many people ask me, "How do you do it all? How do you become successful at your job while ㉠ having a family?" Now I'm going to give you an entirely honest answer: I don't.

Whenever I'm succeeding in one area of my life, I'm failing in another area. If I'm writing really exciting stories for television, I'm not spending ㉡ enough time with my children. If I'm enjoying a family holiday with my children, I'm not finishing the script ㉢ that I should. If I'm succeeding at one, I'm inevitably failing at the other. This happens with all truly successful people. It will happen to you when you ㉣ will become successful. We all achieve one thing by ㉤ failing to achieve something else. Anyone who tells you they are doing it all perfectly is a liar.
